

Are you aged between 12 and 55 years?

It is necessary to ask your sex at birth for certain examinations involving radiation. You will be asked to sign a form to confirm your answer

This is because a developing embryo/foetus is at greater risk from the potential harmful effects of radiation so it is our legal responsibility to check if pregnancy is a possibility

If your sex at birth is female, or you prefer not to disclose this information, you will need to answer a further question regarding pregnancy

Please let the member of staff performing your examination know if you have any questions
